Tehran accuses CIA of boat hijack, holds Spain responsible for recovery

BEIRUT, Aug. 15 (Agencies)— Iran today accused the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) of masterminding the hijack of a French-built missile boat by exiled Iranians.

The boat was commandeered in Spanish territorial waters and Iran said it was Spain's responsibility to recover the vessel.

The Iranian foreign ministry said in a statement broadcast by Tehran Radio that investigation made "the hand of the CIA ohvious in the recent piracy" of the missile boat off Spain's southern port of Cadiz on Thursday. It reiterated claims that the boat was now in Morocco, despite repeated Moroccan government denials.

The statement quoted by Tehran Radio warned the U.S. government: "Such plots shall not remain unanswered by our risen France's Atlantic port of Chergovernment: "Such plots shall not

Reagan seeks to strengthen firing power against Soviets

SANTA BARBARA, California, Aug. 15 (R) - President Ronald Reagan, interrupting his California holiday, will confer with his chief policy advisers next week on ways of strengthening America's nuclear forces.

He called a meeting in Los Angeles on Monday to discuss his range of options in countering Soviet military power.

Mr. Reagan, whose statement-last week that be would produce the neutron warbead was denounced by Moscow, claimed had embarked on the greatest military buildup in history and that the United States accepted the challenge.

The president planned to confer with Secretary of State Alexander Haig at his ranch outside Santa Barbara tomorrow and then go to Los Angeles on Monday for the defence planning talks with Mr. Haig and Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger. Officials said Mr. Weinberger planned to recommend building a new strategic bomber, a radically new aircraft to carry the MX missile system, more accurate missiles for the Trident submarine and improvements in the military communications system controlling strategic forces.

In announcing the meeting, the White House spokesman said that studies were continuing on how the United States could improve its strategic forces, following President Reagan's decision to increase defence spending.

But Mr. Reagan would not make final decisions until he returned to Washington on Sept. 3, at the end of a month-long boliday in California and probably not until after Congress resumed its session a week later.

Other officials said Mr. Reagan, which President Carter cancelled, who accused President Carter in the 1980 election campaign of neglecting America's strength. wanted to achieve nuclear superiority by 1990. Officials said two of the most important decisions facing the president were to decide whether to build the B-1 strategic bomber. and to choose another new atteran for use as an airborne base for the MX missile. Present plans call for the MX system to be buried in the western United States and for the missiles themselves to be maved from time to time to evade detection by Soviet recomaissance satellites.

During the service several hundred people staged peaceful demonstrations in Tokyo against what they regarded as government moves to alter Japan's warrenouncing constitution and revive militarism, police said.

Mr. Suzuki and all but two of his 21-member cabinet visited the Yasukuni shrine to pray for the war dead, including executed wartime leader Hideki Tojo, despite protests from leftists and other religious groups that their actioo glorified war.

Religious, cultural and labour groups asserted after Mr. Suzuki and 18 cabinet ministers visited the shrine last year that they had violated the constitution, which separated politics and religion.

Mr. Suzuki said again this year that he was making the visit as a private citizen, although he added "prime minister" when he signed the visitor's book.

PATCO's legality in question

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration won a major victory last night io its legal battle against the striking Professional Air Traffic Cootrollers Organisation (PATCO) when a government legal official recommended that the union be stripped of its hargaining authority for engaging in an illegal strike.

As federal employees, the PATCO workers were barred by U.S. law from walking off the job and about 12,000 of them have been fired since the strike for higher pay and other benefits began 13 days ago.

PATCO President Roben Poli said he was prepared to fight the recommendation "all the way to the Supreme Coun" and repeated his belief that union members were willing to carry oo their strike despite the pressure.

Fake radio commands

Federal authorities are also investigating reports of fake radio commands being given to aircraft and interference with commuoications between control towers and pilots. Transportation Secretary Drew

Lewis, who said there was no evidence that striking air cootrollers were involved, disclosed that there had been seven reports of fake instructions and 10 cases of interference with ground-to-air transmissions.

All the false instructions had heen quickly countermanded by real controllers and in none of the cases had safety been jeopardised, he said.

"All of these incidents are being investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Federal Communications Commission and anyone responsible for these acts will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law." Mr.

Lewis added. He said deliberate interference

MIDDLE EAST NEWS BRIEFS

Bani-Sadr not offered asylum in Egypt

PARIS, Aug. 15 (A.P.) — A spokesman for former Iranian president Abol Hassan Bani-Sadr denied today that the ousted leader had been offered political asylum in Egypt. "There has been absolutely no contact between the Egyptian authorities and Mr. Bani-Sadr," the spokesman said, stressing that Mr. Bani-Sadr would refuse such a proposition. The spokesman was responding to an earlier statement issued today in Tehran by the Iranian foreign ministry which claimed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had offered Mr. Bani-Sadr political asylum. Mr. Baoi-Sadr escaped to France July 29 and was granted polinical asylum on the condition he refrain from making any public declarations.

Ankara to cut suspect detention period

ANKARA, Aug. 15 (R) - Prime Minister Bulend Ulusu said today there would be a reduction next week in Turkey's controversial 90-day period during which suspects are held before being charged. Mr. Ulusu, speaking at a news conference, did not say how much the reduction would be. Unofficial estimates say about 30,000 people are in detention awaiting trial for illegal or violent political activity. The 90-day period has been criticised abroad as a violation of human rights. It was introduced by the military junta shortly after it took power from the civilian govermment last September. The junta argued it was necessary to combat extensive networks of warring political factions. In the 11 months since the military takeover, Mr. Ulusu said, the security forces had restored "order and tranquillity" and Turkey's economic problems were easing. The aim now, he went on, was to create a "healthy and geouine democracy."

Police unearth IRA bomb works

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland, Aug. 15 (A.P.) - Police said today they had defused 360 kilogrammes of explosives discovered in a Lon-donderry apartment they labelled an Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory.

The explosives, packed in beer kegs, would have been used in an IRA bomb blitz of the downtown business district in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second-largest city, a police spokesman said. Some 200 residents of the predominantly Roman Catholic Shantallow district in North Londonderry worked to disarm the explosives. Authorities said they were tipped off to the location of the bomb-making materials by local residents who became suspicious about the number of people seen coming and going at the apartment.

In Lurgan, Couoty Armagh, police reported finding a cache of gasoline bombs and other equipmeot io a field, a spokesman for the predominantly Protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary said.

The embattled province has seen an upsurge in street violence since March 1, when IRA guerrillas jailed at the Maze Prison near Belfast went on hunger-strikes to back demands for political prisoner status. The U.S. emhassy in Duhlin yesterday rehuffed an attempt by relatives of the fasting prisoners to Supporters of the hunger-strikers have been calling on the U.S. government, as well as those of Canada and Italy, to pressure British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to make concessions to the protesters, nine of whom have died. She refuses to grant the prisoners' demands, saying this would in effect surrender control of the prison to terrorists.

Jack of all trades masters one

AMMAN — Before hus driver Sulieman Abu Zaid finished his secondary school education a long time ago, his friends had called him "jack of all trades, but master of none." He tried his hand at almost everything, from playing for the Baq'a soccer team in the early seventies to opening a billiard hall, and from blacksmithing to bus driving. Right now, he still describes himself as "jack of all trades" but claims he is "master of

He also says that before he embarked on his project Dome of the Rock, he had closely scrutinised many pictures of the shrine in order to obtain a bigh degree of accuracy and perfection.

The dome in Mr. Abu Zaid's model is made of transparent plastic, finished with gold to give the same effect when lit from the inside. The ceiling of the shrine,

"When I saw it, I became fully sure that what I did was a true model of the huge glittering shrine," he says.

But while he seems satisfied with the general shape of the model Mr. Abu Zaid has introduced several changes to it since he finished it. He says other changes will be made "as long as I receive further ideas from friends and critics.

The 1.5 x 1 x 1 metre model is now exhibited at Mr. Abu Zaid's house and already he has had the opportunity to display it at two public exhibitions in Amman. He says he needs "ample space" to display his future works, which he describes as "more cute" than his maiden output.

People, he says, have offered to pay him more than JD 450 for the Dome of Rock model, but he has declined all the offers because he believes that the work is worth more than that. "I know that the raw materials are not that expensive, but still the subject itself bears great significance that appeals to the majority of the population. he says.

He also says that he is prepared to do any model of any significant site in the Arab and Islamic world, for anybody who likes to have it. "I believe that this 'trade' will be my last to settle in, but all I am awaiting is fortune and good luck," Mr. Ahu Zaid says as he. recalls how by chance he came to undertake the new trade and how surprisingly he excelled in it.

"The other models I will do, will be better than this hecause this first work has given me some insight into the perfect model of the Dome of Rock that can be produced," he says. There are other models in the market, "but they lack creativity and stress the commercial side." The models Mr. Abu Zaid refers to are those made of light wood and covered with mosaic.

"Those models bear no similitude to the original shrine as much as mine does," he says, adding that trees, velvet, decorations and the fine touches are missing in the models currently on sale. He concludes that be has sacrificed "many glamorous effects" in his bid to bring the model closer to its original, thus giving it the unique facade not present in other

A reasoned look at he Palestine issue

ESTIMIAN SELF-DETERMINATION: A study of the West and Gaza Strip, by Hassan Ibn Talal, Crown Prince of Jordan.

These his and their bases are rined in detail. At the risk of repetitious, the writer has o go back in time to emphashe legality of such claims, ang them up to date; and to terate them more than once, bly in order to enable these facts to penetrate—especially into the western mind, which until very recently has been unable or unwilling to grasp them, and also to refute Israel's illegal counter-

It is made clear in this part of the book that whereas the Palestinians have until now been denied any opportunity to achieve statehood, massive illegal Jewish and immigration into Palestine bas very seriously upset the demographic, social and economic balance in the country, and allowed the Zionists to usurp a state by force as early as 1948. And the process of "elbowing out" the indigenous Arah Palestinians continues until the present day.

It is high time that the legal claims of the Palestinians to their territory were put forward in such a manner, and it is high time that the unjustifiable Israeli claims be contested. This is done successfully in the largest section of the book. Put quite simply, the author confronts Israeli legal and political apologists on their doorstep, and defeats them at their own game.

It is in the chapters on the appraisal of legal claims and proposed solutions that the writer comes into his own, when he states that Israel knows that there will be oo peace as long as Israelis deny the Palestinians their bomeland. By Suzanne Zu'mut-Black Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, Aug. 15 - Thirty children between the ages of 11 and 14, representing eight Arab countries, will descend on Amman on Sunday and Monday for a week-long visit to Jordan at the invitation of Her Majesty Queen Noor. The guests will be met and escorted throughout the visit by 10 Jordanian children—four from Amman and two each from Irbid, Salt and Karak.

The countries which have accepted the invitation are Tunis, Morocco, Algeria, Oman, Kuwait, Sudan, Bahrain and Saudi Arabia. Each will be represented by two boys and two girls-with the exception of Saudi Arabia, which will be sending two boys only.

The project, called Common Heritage, is intended as an annual event. It was initiated by Queen Noor last year on the occasion of the Year of the Child, when 11 countries responded to the invitation. Each year's programme is envisaged as having a special theme, with this year's accent on music. Governments have been asked to select children who are musically inclined, and the programme is full of musical events or occasions to the accompaniment of Arabic

On Tuesday, the young representatives will attend a musical play produced by the Friends of Children club at the Palace of Culture. In the evening, they will all get together for an informal party of Jnrdanian and Arab singing and dancing.

Mr. Nabil Sawalha, Director of the Haya Arts Centre, will act as the master of ceremonies at this party. "The aim is to help the children shed their inhibitions and get to know each other." Mr.

The Haya Centre itself will be the scene of a visit on Thursday morning, in which the children will get involved in painting. sculpture, puppetry and all sorts of crafts activities available at the centre. Music will be present in the form of the Jordanian dabke folk

On Thursday afternoon, the young visitors will be guests of Queen Noor for tea at the Nadwa Palace.

Music on site

Besides touring historical and important sites in the capital, the children will also be shown sites outside Amman. A trip to Petra on Wednesday has its own musical attraction: youths from Karak and Ma'an will perform for the junior visitors and their hosts, when they dance to Jordanian music right at the ancient site. A tour of Jerash on Friday will also be enhanced by music when it ends in Ajloun. There, at a scouts' camp, the party will be entertained after lunch by folk dancing and music performed by children of the

Another tnur will take them on Saturday to Umm Qais and the army's front lines, where they will luoch with soldiers and have a chance to listen to another kind of music-from the army band.

The day will end with a very rich and colourful musical and social event: a Jordaniao wedding, acted out by members of the Irbid Youth Ceotre at Yarmouk University.

The preparations for this programme have been quite extensive, and involved many participants. Queen Noor berself, besides initiating the project, chaired many committee meetings preparing for it, while the Ministry of Foreign Affairs made all the contacts with Arab

Another of the major participants in organising and implementing the programme is the Ministry of Culture and Youth, which will constantly supervise the children and accompany them throughout Supervisors from the ministry will be working closely with supervisors arriving with the children, one for each country. All the supervisors, as well as the guests and bost children, will be staying in one hotel. The ministry has also offered its facilities at Al Hussein Youth City to be at the disposal of the children.

Alia, the Royal Jordanian Airline, has provided all the tickets and travel arrangements, and bas presents for the guests. It also plays an active role in the welcoming committee.

The Ministry of Tourism is also standing by with its own gifts, besides being ready to host the young travellers in its resthouses when they head to historical sites in the country.

The Friends of the Children, ready with their play, also have their own representative in the welcoming committee, and a supervisor in charge of the Jordanian children.

Besides musical performances by the army band, the armed forces will also provide a doctor and a nurse to accompany the group at all

The Ministry of Information will be contributing with the most tangible outcome of the project: audio tapes of Jordanian folk music and a video tape covering the visit to be produced and telecast by Jordan Television. An information kit including copies of this material will be given to each country's representatives to take bome with

A less tangible, but more important, aim is to achieve closer cultural ties between the children, that will reflect in the future on the ties between Arab countries.

Unconvincing

THE FUNNIES never end. Now, we are told, the United States wants to create a nuclear-free zone in the Middle East. That is, in itself, a fine idea, and one that has been proposed and supported by the Arab World for many years. But who's kidding whom? Is the United States proposing a nuclear-free zone in the Middle East, or only in the Arab World? The stark facts are that Israel already has nuclear bomb capabilities (based on enriched uranium stolen from American facilities, no less), and certainly bas between 10 and 20 nuclear warheads already manufactured and ready for use.

If the United States is suggesting an effort to keep nuclear weapons out of the entire Middle East, including Israel, then we welcome the idea and will work actively to promote it. But if the American leadership is simply proposing another skewed, shameless scheme by which Israel will be exempted from following the rules of accepted international conduct, then our reply is negative. The United States must keep in mind that it has become a non-credible party in this part of the world. We rarely believe its statements, and, more often than not, we no longer trust its intentions or respect its conduct in the region. Furthermore, we have yet to see any convincing proof that its massive support for Israel is matched by any sense of responsibility for the ravages of Israel's runaway militarism in the Middle East. If the nuclear-free zone proposal is to include Israel, we would like to know bow and if Israel is to be included in the scheme. Untilthen, we regard the whole matter as unconvincing.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'L Washington's reported efforts to seek a treaty against nuclear weapons in the Middle East clearly reveals U.S. intentions to make Israel the exclusive possessor of such weapons in the region. Consequently this would offer Israel the chance to maintain its military superiority, and would ensure continued Zionist-American hegemony and domination of the whole reg-

The United States realises that Israel is the only party in the Middle East which has nuclear weapons, and is the only party which has not so far signed the nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty: and it continues to resist attempts to impose international supervision over its Dimona nuclear reactor despite its claims that the plant is being employed for peaceful purposes. .

It is clear then that the U.S. is launching its efforts for a treaty now in the wake of Israel's raid on the nuclear reactor in Baghdad with the hope of impeding Iraqi efforts to reconstruct the plant.

Of course the U.S. will seek to pressure France and other nations to prevent their cooperation with Iraq in carrying out its project. We would like to ask Washington whether Israel would ever honour any nuclear treaties, and whether Israel would allow others to deprive it of the nuclear weapons it now possesses. The Arabs, if given favourable answers to these questions, would certainly accept Washington's proposals and will be willing to cooperate in making the region a nuclear-free zone. AL DUSTOUR: It has become evident now that Israel's Defence

Minister Ariel Sharon's mandate in the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip will usber in the most dangerous phase yet of the Zionist oppressive rule. Perhaps this mandate signals the start of the final countdown for total Israeli annexation of Arab land as declared by Prime Minister Menachem Begin before the Knesset. No matter how hard Sharon will try to make the autonomy rule seem attractive, and whatever his efforts will be to lure the Arab inbabitants towards his web, he can deceive no one. Arabs under Israeli rule know for sure that the Zionist strategy remains unchanged - based on agresssion, expansionism and domination of Arab territory.

The Arabs in general, and the Palestinian people in particular, realise that Sharon is one of their most wicked and bitter enemies who has exercised a policy of terrorism and oppression over the Throughout his political and military careers. Sharon has been intent on encouraging Zionist extremists to establish settlements on confiscated Arab land and offering them protection and facilities to achieve that goal. He is a member of Begin's government which had won the election on the basis of adherence to the Zionist principles and ideology which considers the West Bank and the Gaza Strip as an integral part of the Zionist state.

Surely, this government would not have granted Sharon his mandate bad it not reckoned in advance the programme which be will implement, and his efficiency in handling this task. Therefore the proposed dialogue with the Palestinians which Sharon is about to embark on is nothing but a snare to trap a few local inhabitants whom he hopes to bring to the negotiating table.

Of course the Israeli government knows in advance that the Arab inhabitants will reject the autonomy rule since it is no more than another form of occupation designed to keep them under the total mercy of the Zionist state. When finally the autonomy plan fails altogether, the Israeli government will tell the world that the Arabs do not want to cooperate with Israel.

In view of the situation, the Arab states should not stand idly by and leave their brethren to the merciless enemies. They must find more effective means for supporting their brethren's steadfastness and should adopt speedy and imanimous action to bring about international pressure to bear on Israel and prevent it from executing its malignant designs.

Palestinian Self-determination

By H.R.H. Crown Prince Hassan

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Jordan Times starts publishing today major excerpts of H.R.H. Crown Prince Hassan's new book: Palestinian Selfdetermination. The book has been published recently by Quartet Books.

THIS STUDY is supplementary to an earlier study of the juridical status of the City of Jerusalem which was published in November 1979. Although it is not feasible to make a clear separation of the legal issues concerning Jerusalem. on the one hand, and the West Bank and the Gaza Strip on the other, as they are essentially inter-related, the City and the territories with which this study is concerned, present certain distinct legal features. It is generally conceded that the Arab-Israeli dispute in the Near East is, in legal terms, unique, both in its back-ground and its development. The tain distinctive characteristics that reflect this unique quality. The Arah-Zionist dispute has proved intractable at least since 1936 when an accommodation might have been reached. Since the termination of the British Mandate in 1948, the dispute bas caused four wars and a wide miscellany of acts of violence. At the present time the dispute constitutes one of the most serious threats to international peace. The increasing and close involvement of two Great Powers, the USA and the USSR, the sophistication of the weapoury available to the disputants, the oil embargo imposed after the 1973 War, contemporary Israeli intransigence, and the mounting aspirations of the Palestinian people, led by the Palestine Liberation Organization, have all played a part in exacerbating the sharpness of the dispute. The long drawn-out tragedy of the Palestinian refugees from their homelands, the mounting strength and confidence of Israel, the Egyptian-Israeli Peace Treaty of March 1979, and its impact upon the alignment of the Arab States, have combined to make the political situation in the Near East both fluid and dangerous. The impact of the oil embargo of 1973 has Added to these factors, the internal policies of the State of Israel bave been marked by a mounting resurgence of its ambi-tion to revive Biblical Israel as political reality. The peace concluded between Israel and Egypt in March 1979 has been ambivalent in its political results. One major area of conflict may have been removed, but it has accentuated the likelihood of conflict in other directions. The Palestinians have become conscious that the wrongs they have suffered over the last half century are slowly attracting the support of the international community of States. They are aware that their leadership, the PLO, is becoming recognized as an important political force in the world. In 1974 the UN General Assembly conferred on the PLO the status of observer in the United Nations. The PLO has now been recognized by virtually all international organisations as the representative of the Palestinian people. UN specialised agencies. such as UNESCO, WHO, etc., have given it observer status. Some other international bodies. such as the Non-Aligned Conference, the Islamic Conference Bank dependent upon that of and the Arab League, have Israel that the former is now, to a admitted the PLO as a full large extent, integrated into the member, and have consistently latter. This study is limited to the confines of its title. That title excludes a number of other controversial legal matters, although some of them are germane to the contemporary status of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. This study is not concerned with the legal status of Jerusalem, although it is manifest that no settlement of the future of the West Bank or Gaza Strip can be divorced from the future of the city.

In October 1974, Arab Heads of State and Government declared their affirmation of the right of the Arab Palestinian people to the return of its homeland and its right of selfdetermination', and recognized the PLO as 'the sole legitimate representative of the. Palestinian people'. Soon after. the General Assembly (by 105 votes to four, with twenty abstentions) invited the PLO to participate in its proceedings. On 22 November 1974 the General Assembly passed (by eight-seven votes to eight, with thirty-seven abstentions) Resolution 3236 (XXIX) establishing international recognition of the rights of the Palestinian people. In 1975 the Assembly established a Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (known informally as the Committee on Palestinian Rights) now composed of twentythree members and ten observers.

Such factors heighten the tension between Israeli and Palestinian political ambidons. The Israelis have become more demanding about their national security and the recognition of Israel by the Arab neighbour States. The Palestinians have become more insistent and emphatic that they will be content with nothing less than a Palestinian State in the territory of the former Mandate of Palestine in which Israel has been militarily present and dominant since the June 1967 War. At the same time Israel, in its new 'forward' policies, has shown increasing reluctance to withdraw from the territories it has occupied since that war, in particular, the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and the eastern City of Jerusalem and its environs. As an adjunct to the territorial sovereignty claim of the Palestinians, and the Israeli denial thereof, there is the ever-present refugee question. Three million six hundred thousand Palestinians now live as refugees outside the territory of the former Palestine Mandate. This situation is, in its turn, exacerbated by the mcreasdivisive issues present in this area of the world. They are interlinked and mutually agitate each other. Among these divisive factors lie the ancient disputes about the Holy Places sacred to the three monotheistic religions of the world: Muslim, Jewish and Christian. The Holy Places of these three religions, formerly all within the confines of the Palestine Mandate, are now under the exclusive control and surveillance of Israel. The proposal by Israel that Israeli territorial sovereignty over the areas in which the Holy Places are located can be accommodated with functional autonomy for the three religions concerned, is acceptable neither to the neighbouring Arab States, the Palestinian Arabs, nor to the large numbers of Muslims in the rest of the world.

The Near East Arab-Israeli dispute consists of layers of divisive issues that cannot easily be separated one from another. The accumulative force of so many deep divisions, diverse in nature, lasting over more than half a century and exacerbated by recent developments, constitute a volatile situation which could erupt at any time into a major outbreak of armed conflict not confined to the territories of Israel, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Aside from cautious recognition of UN Resolutions, neither party shows any inclination to reach a compromise, to negocate their respective claims, or even a willingness for hilateral or multilateral dialogue. Some Arabs consider that the answer to this dangerous situation lies with the USA. However, that country is itself placed in a dilemma in relation to the Arab-Israeli confrontation. The internal. and external policies of the USA have, until now, displayed a steady support of Israel and its economic and military demands. There is, however, a heavy US dependence on oil from Arab States, parocularly from Saudi Arahia and the United Arab Emirates. Also, US external policies in the Near-

East are designed to counter any

USSR in the area. The resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict does not fall within the exclusive grasp of the USA. Such success as the USA may have gained by furthering the peace initiatives carried out by Egypt towards Israel cannot be assumed to be available for resolving the Arab-Israeli dispute and the future of the Palestinians. The very success of the USA as the 'accoucheur' of the Arab-Israeli Peace Treaty of March 1979 may work to the detriment of peaceful endeavours on its part directed to such critical issues as the future of the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Jerusalem, the return of the Palestinian refugees, Israel's withdrawal and the disbandment of all Israeli settlements in the non-Israeli territories controlled by

What then, it may be asked, is the value of a study of the legal issues embedded in the disputes concerning the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Golan Heights? The isolation and analysis of those legal issues which are considered central to the current Arab-Israeli dispute can play a useful role in any attempt to move towards reconciliation of the disputants, the preparation of a dialogue between them and other interested parties, and preparing the foundations of the proposals for future peaceful relations in the area. There is also a certain value in 'clarifying' the legal perspectives both in the historical background of the dispute and in formulating and identifying the issues that are fundamental at the present time.

The dispute has gone through many phases since 1922 when the British Mandate over Palestine was established. Each of these phases, as with all aspects of international relations, has its own legal aspect. As one phase gave way to another, fresb and more complex legal issues emerged.

The aspirations of the international community in the post-1945 era are expressed in Article I (I) of the UN Charter: '... to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the prin-ciples of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace'. The fact that this intention bas too often been thwarted in the post-1945 era in no way destroys its moral and juridical value.

No dialogue designed to reach a peaceful solution of disputes can proceed without hearing the claims of the adversaries and appraising their strengths and weaknesses. This applies to the legal claims that lie beneath the political demands. Law is about life or it is of little value. This is no less the case in international relations. Abstract justice is probably too high an ambition in inter-State disputes. States are composed of individuals, governing and governed. The UN Charter relates 'justice' to 'international law', and with good reason. If international law is the body of principles and rules accepted hy States as hinding upon them in the conduct of their relationships, then international lawl is the common base of agreement from which attempts to resolve inter-State and other international differences must be approached.

THE LAST few days witnessed a thorough discussion of the second five-year development plan (1981-1985). The discussion was chaired by the prime minister with the active participation of both public and private sectors.

The successful implementation of this plan will accelerate the development process. and will contribute to the economic and social welfare of this country.

The major appeal of a development plan is that it can significantly influence the pace and the direction of economic development. This, by itself, is an extremely difficult task to achieve because of the com-plexity of the economic variahles which affect the development process. Economic planners, whoever they are and in whatever country they operate, are forced to make certain assumptions related to the expected behaviour of certain variables. The complicated functional relationships among a large number of interrelated economic variables may also force them to confine their analysis to a small number of variables at a time, on the assumption that all other things remain unchanged or, as some ting it, ceteris paribus.

The achievement of the major objectives of a certain development plan relies hear. ily on the planner's skill in mak. ing accurate predictions, and on the behaviour of other betors which will have been assumed equal. Any maps-dictable changes in one or more of these factors will inevitably affect the plant achievements.

It is crystal clear that the Jordanian economic planters have put a tremendous effort into the new development plan. Their aim throughout the preparation stage for the plan has consistently been to bring the closer to the optimal allo cation of resources. However, their effective role during the implementation stage must an further beyond the issue of progress reports.
What is really seeded is continuous and thorough evaluation of the plan's achievements, with the participation of both the public and the private sectors. The aim of such an evaluation will be to update the plan and to modify it when necessary. This will be the only way to alleviate the harmful effects of impredictable changes.

which the civilised adjustment and disposal of international disputes gives way to violence and force. Justice according to law is the pragmatic peak of achievement in international relations. The alternative is the unilateral assertion of the 'justness' of its claims by each disputant and the correlative-'unjustness' of those of its opponent. Such claims do not lend themselves to objective determination. The usual outcome is armed violence.

Since this study is concerned with the juridical status of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, the legal issue of the territorial sovereignty in respect of those territories in the central legal issue to be considered. Beneath it are clusters of subordinate legal issues. Whether territorial sovereignty exists in respect of a particular part of the earth's surface at any time, and in what political and legal entity it inheres, if any, controls what that entity may lawfully do in that area, and the lawful authority it may exercise over all persons in that area. It may be said that any judicial organ entrusted with deciding, according to law, a tory of Palestine and the Palestine large number of the matters in tinians. daily dispute in the West Bank and Gaza Strip could not avoid determining the question of whether. there is territorial sovereignty in those areas and in what body, if any, it now inheres. Having regard to the history of these territories since 1922, the determination of that fundamental question is a difficult matter.

If the better legal answer be that territorial sovereignty over these territories is not at present vested in any political entity, it may become necessary to consider which entity has the better claim to it. This matter is not confined to the status of the territory, but includes the claims and status of the inhabitants and of those who bave fled from it, and the latter's rights of return and compensation.

By way of caution it is stres that the dispute with which t study is concerned cannot resolved exclusively by legal or siderations. Such consideration cannot, however, be exchange from the negotiations and or clusion of any settlement that m one day be reached. The civilia issue is the nature of the authority which bas been, and is being, exercised de facto in those territories, i.e., the authority exercised by Israel since 1967 to the present time. The legal nature of that authority determines the lawfulness and unlawfulness of the acts of administration and control performed by Israel therein during the last fourteen years, including the right of Israel to remain in those areas and the conditions it is legally entitled to demand, if any, before its withdrawal from such territories. Such legal questions flow from the nature of belligerent occupation, control of 'administered areas', purported annexation, quasi-trusteeship, and the right of self-defence.

As to the future, an important legal issue will be the meaning and significance of the principle of self-determination of peoples, referred to in Article I (2) of the UN Charter: '... to develop friendly relations among nationsof equal rights and selfdetermination of peoples ... The reason for this is obscure, especially so when Dr. Sharkas reiterates the fact that "Islamic culture has always urged people to read. In medieval times there were 3-5 million Islamic manuscripts scattered all over the world, which at that time exceeded the output of any other culture. But in recent times, perhaps for political, social and economic reasons, people have turned away from reading."

One way of encouraging a return to reading has been the celebration of an annual Book Week, which the Department organises for every first week in April. Dr. Sharkas was particularly happy about this year's response to the occasion. "When we first started the National Book Weeks, the only participants were from the department itself," be said. "This year, however, every district in the country became involved. There were panel discussions at the University of Jordan, a children's book display in Zarqa, I gave a lecture at the Writers' Association and Irhid and Karak held their own book exhibitions too."

Another way of stimulating interest in books are the children's reading competitions in which participants are asked to read a certain number of books, on which they will be later asked questions. "All the various levels have shown improvement," Dr. Sharkas said.

The biggest obstacle faced by Dr. Sharkas when he started the department was the lack of qualimmediately in 1978, with the support of the British Council, the department introduced a library science, documentation and arccourse at the University of Jordan. All these efforts have certainly increased public awareness, as demonstrated by the fact that recently Dr. Sharkas received the first request from a community for a public district library. Using this opportunity as a case study for future district libraries, many facts have been obtained about the area, the social orientation of the community, the number of children and other indicators. Labour militancy increases in South Africa's mines

By Steven Friedman

JOHANNESBURG: After several years of relative tranquillity, South Africa's gold mines have been hit by an upsurge of unrest among their black migrant miners.

Five mines have experienced incidents of violeot protest in recent weeks, in what amounts to the most serious disturbances among the industry's 450,000-; strong black labour force since the mid-1970s, when more than 200 miners died in rints.

The latest unrest comes at a time when manufacturing industry in South Africa bas experienced a dramatic increase in black labour militancy, and a sharp rise in the number of industrial disputes. According to official figures, there were 207 strikes last year, costing 174,000 man-days, more than the figure for man-days lost in the entire 1975-79 period.

It is estimated that there has been at least a strike a day this year, hut it is only in receot weeks that the gold mining industry, the real motor of the South African ecoonmy, has been affected. The truth is that mining remains a very separate world to the rest of the country's industry, and there is littie-up in the industrial unrest. The strike wave in industry followed a marked increase in black worker skills and assertiveness. It coincided with the growth of an increasingly sophisticated trade unioo movement. Most of this bas passed the mines by.

ples of the failure of the present system of communications, most major mining houses remain sceptical about a mnre formalised system of industrial relations through the medium of trade unions. Draft guidelines drawn up within the mining industry give an insight into its attitude. The guidelioes suggest that unionists shoud ont be allowed to meet workers in the compounds or at work. They also advise mines nnt to bargain with unions - eveo if they represent a majority of workers oo the individual mine unless they represent 30 per cent of eligible workers in the mining industry as a whole.

The draft rejects negotiation with unioos which do not register with the government. Some interpret it to mean that blacks could iotrnduction of a new death not be unimpised unless the white union in their job category wished a to recruit them — and some white mine unious are opposed in principle to black unionisation.

The guidelines have not been finalised and mine employers stress that they could be changed in the future. They also reject the charge that they are designed to keep unions out. But unless they are drastically revised, and unionists are permitted free access to workers, they are likely to act as a brake on unionisation.

The fact that most black miners are migrants also has the effect of isolating them from those trends in secondary industry which have encouraged rising militancy. In particular, black miners have not benefited from the skilled status which an increasing number of black workers in industry enjoy. They are legally barred from holdiog blasting certificates -- the prerequisite for official skilled worker status underground.

A government commission report, due soon, is expected to recommend that they be granted access to these certificates -- but only if white mine unions are consulted, and they are likely to oppose it. The Mine Workers' Union has even threatened to strike if blacks are granted the cer-

Protests continue as All Blacks win the first test

WELLINGTON, Aog. 15 (R) — Police arrested 150 people in anti-apartheid protests in three cities today coinciding with the first rugby international match between South Africa and New Zealand in Christchurch.

About 6,000 demonstrators chanting "don't play rugby with a fascist state" marched oo the match venue and some clashed with police.

Riot police batoo-charged a group of 200 protesters who tried to break through police lines into the ground. Twelve demonstrators were later treated in hospital but oo serious injuries were reported.

An estimated 2,000 police, nearly half the country's total force, were deployed in Christ-church which had been braced since yesterday for serious trouble during the match, woo by New Zealand's All Blacks by 14 points

Police said that of the 150 arrests, mostly for disorderly behaviour, less than 30 were made in Christchurch. The others were io Auckland and Wellington where protest marches disrupted traffic.

The South Africans, who have been tightly guarded throughoot their two-month New Zealand tour, were smuggled into the ground before dawn for today's match. Police said today's protests were mostly orderly and low key.

The start of the match was delayed by five mioutes while officials checked the playing surface after some protesters had run onto the pitch.

In Auckland, eight protesters stormed into an Air New Zealand

Kanja, Jaruzelski return as Glemp urges restraint

MOSCOW, Aug. 15 (R) — Polish chief Stanislaw Kania left the Crimea for home today after meeting Kremlin boss Leonid Brezhnev against a backdrop of preparations for major Soviet manoeuvres around Poland.

Mr. Kania, accompanied hy Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski, arrived at Presideot Brezhnev's holiday retreat yesterday for consultations on Polaod's continuing political troubles and food shortages.

A Tass news agency report gave no details of their talks yesterday but said a joint communique would be published.

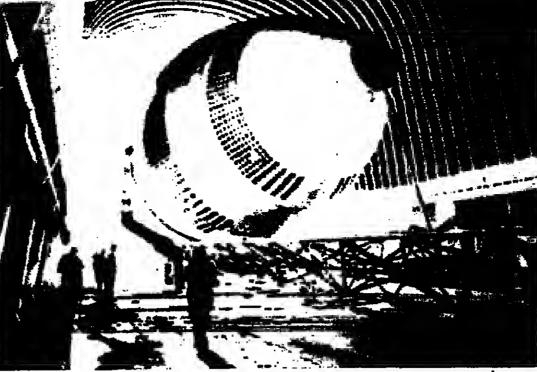

Western diplomats in Moscow believe Mr. Brezhnev would have urged Mr. Kania to take a hard line against any further strike calls. The Soviet media has made it clear in recent weeks it believes the Solidarity trade union is aiming to overthrow the Polish Communist Party.

The 74-year-old Kremlio leader will almost certainly have reiterated assurances, made at two previous summits with Mr. Kania. that the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact allies would render any assistance to support the Polish Party, the diplomats said.

Last Thursday Moscow announced week-long military manoeuvres along Poland's land froncer with Byelorussia and the Soviet Balde states as well as on the Baltie Sea.

Western diplomats believe the manoeuvres, which hegin on Sept. 4, could be intended to maintain pressure on both government and

Indian oil state on strike

NEW DELHI, Aug. 15 (R) — A bomb exploded on a railway line at Pandu in India's northeastern state of Assam today as normal life in the state was paralysed by a 24-hour general strike.

The track was damaged but oo casualties were reported io the explosion. It was the only incident in the strike, called by leaders of a 22-month-old agitation against foreign immigrants.

The strike went ahead despite an official announcement last night that the Indian government had invoked new anti-strike powers to ban stoppages in the oilproducing state for six months.

The stoppage, which began yesterday and was due to end at 7 p.m. (1330 GMT) today, was also staged in protest against the new anti-strike measures.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said in a speech in Delhi today marking the 34th anniversary of India's independence that the ordinance to probibit strikes in essential services had been mis-

She did not mendon Pakistan by name, but was clearly referring to that country when she said "The piling up of arms in India's neighbourhood poses a danger to all.... India will have to be extra vigilant."

Mrs. Gandhi also spoke of the difficulties people faced because of rising prices, and said the upward trend had been arrested. Hoarding, black marketeering and profiteering were partly to blame for the price rises, she added.

She defended the recent decisloo to buy 1.5 million tonnes of wheat from the U.S., saying it had beeo bought comparatively cheaply and would be kept as a buffer stock and to deter hoarders hoping to force up domestic

Three Japanese climbers lost in China

HONG KONG, Aug. 15 (R) — Three Japanese mountaineers are missing in an attempt to scale the 7,719-metre Mount Kongur in China's Xinjiang region, the New China News Agency (NCNA) has said. The agency quoted Ryvichi Kotani, leader of the Japanese expedition, as saying in Peking on arrival from Xinjiang that team members were continuing to search for the missing climbers. The trio began their assault on the peak on July 20, the agency said. Two days later bad weather interrupted their ascent and they were lost to sight on July 31. "Base camp observers speculated the three were lost on thier way back after conquering the peak," the.

Cops and robbers use pigeons in the game

HONG KONG, Aug. 15 (R) — Police are trying to home in on a pigeon-fancier with a crimioal bent. He has been threatening for the past month to blow up the office of an oil company unless he is paid 470,000 dollars ($80,000) to be delivered by pigeoo. Officials refuse to discuss the case but informed sources say it is being treated seriously, especially after 20 pigeons were left at a pick-up point, with instructions on how payment should be made. Police released the birds but they carried electronic devices instead of money and were followed by a helicopter. But they lost track of the flock and the cext day the company had an angry telephone call reporting that only three birds had returned to their loft and cooe had any money. This week, several warning calls later, the extortionist delivered another basket, this time with six pigeons. They were released by police but managed to flutter only a few hundred feet before crashing back to earth. "May be they were overloaded with gadgets," one source said. "Certainly, they did not have any money. You would need a lot more than six or even 20 pigeons to carry 470,000 dollars." Police, meanwhile, are checking on bird-breeders in the colooy.

People's Daily admits its shortcomings

PEKING, Aug. 15 (R) - The People's Daily, the staid and often turgid mouthpiece of the Chinese Communist Party, bas acknowledged on its front page that its stories were too long. It devoted a third of the page to the topic, including a reader's letter saying: "The longer the articles, the fewer the people who read them." According to recent figures, the People's Daily's circulation has shrunk from six million several years ago to 5.3 million. The biggest selling newspaper in China, with a circulation of about $.5 million, is a four-page tabloid called Reference News which consists largely of foreign news reports reprinted from foreign newspapers and news agencies. It would sell even more copies but foreign diplomats, journalists and businessmen are not

DETROIT — The depressed American automobile industry is accelerating the number of mental patients in this car capital. As the lines of jobless workers from the car industry grow at unemployment offices, so do the lines at hospitals and community crisis centres.

Local authorities are concerned by a marked increase in mental health problems in the Detroit area, heartland of the country's car industry and home of America's "big three" car com-panies, General Motors, Ford and Hospitals report a record level of mental patients being admitted and some centres are even having to turn people away.

More people are also crying out for help on emergency hotline telephone services.

"There seems to be an increasing number of calls about violence, about suicide, about domestic violence," said Diane Wilkins, who answers one hotline in Detroit.

She says the number of emergency calls has gone up by 1,000 a month during the past

Health officials link the rising incidence of mental stress to high unemployment and say there is an increasing sense of despair among om-of-work people who feel they have no hope of getting jobs.

Detroit, a city of 1.2 million that it nearly two-thirds black, has the highest unemployment rate of any major city in the United States. Almost 15 per cent of the workforce have no jobs - twice the national average of unemployment.

The picture is not quite as bad in the state of Michigan, where the unemployment rate is 11.1 per cent or some 495,000 people out of work.

Judson Stone, director of a community health centre covering southern Detroit, said: "We discovered that three out of every five people coming to our centre were out of work. "And we began to see a significant increase in child abuse, spouse abuse, marital tension... and a lot more drinking". Not all the unemployment, however, can be blamed on the car industry, struggling to get back to profitability after losing four billioo dollars last year.

The number of workers laid off by the car companies stands now at around 160,000 down from a peak of 300,000 last year. But at least half those laid off have no bope of being recalled in the foreseeable future. Their jobs have either gone forever with the shutting down of obsolete plants or lost to robots in new plants equipped with greater auto-

Besides those laid off by the car companies, more than 100.000 other workers have lost jobs m related industries that supplied parts for the car assembly lines.

"It's much worse for those who worked for the small parts manufacturers because they usually did nt have any union welfare funds to fall back on," Mr. Stone He explained that many laid-off workers had delayed their search for other jobs because they believed they would be recalled.

"Gradually the debts pile up and they finally realise they are not going to get their old jobs back," Mr. Stone said. "Some get angry, others get depressed."

He added: "We have people calling up and asking us about life insurance and it's not hard to figure out they are thinking of committing suicide."

And mental health programmes are being curtailed because of a cutback in federal and state funds.
